

Company's Philosophy

We are a middle-sized owner-managed company, independent and conscious of its tradition. We are in equal measure committed to our employees, our customers, our environment and the general public.

We aim to have a confident, open and efficient way to communicate with each other. Only in such a working atmosphere all employees positively motivated can do their contribution to achieve our common target. Each employee should be convinced about the importance of his work, so that he can yield the expected result and also be proud and satisfied about it.

We design and manufacture high quality electrical equipment and devices for classified areas and high voltage coupling technology. We are reliable partner for our customers at any time because of our optimal advisory service during sales and aftersales. Business confidence and customers satisfaction are our very special goal at all times.

We offer our endusers safe, durable and environmentally acceptable products, which are also easy to operate and future-proofed. Our products not only comply with the highest quality standards but they are also extreme safe and long-lasting. Each staff member enhances our prestige through his work and his behaviour, in order to justify the special confidence given to us by our customers.

It is essential for us to maintain our position as one of the market leaders for electrical coupling technology explosionproofed, closely monitoring the market conditions. By the use of permanent market analysis we are able at an early stage to consistently respond to market changes and to adjust our strategies. Following the technical development we will be also in the future able to actively and innovatively shape the market and so to secure and to improve our position. The cooperation with our business partners is planned on a long-term basis and should for both sides be a profitable alliance.
